The therapist needs his conception in order to keep his bearings, to know in what direction to look. It is the acquired habit that is the background for this art as in any other art. But the problem is the same as in any art: how to use this abstraction (and therefore fixation) so as not to lose the present actuality and especially the ongoingness of the actuality? And how - a special problem that therapy shares with pedagogy and politics - not to impose a standard rather than help develop the potentialities of the other?

As Gestalt therapists, how can we approach psychopathology and diagnosis?

How our theory opens new horizons on human suffering and contemporary disturbances?

How the understanding of clinical issues is enhanced by our radical contact-boundary perspective?

How this changes our daily practice in supporting people who suffer?

This International Training offers the possibility to explore main clinical issues throughout the Gestalt therapy theory and to find new keys to understand and support specific kinds of suffering. This exploration will provide a paradigmatic method in approaching psychopathology and diagnosis and connecting them to the clinical practice and to the wider social field.
